What do African American Men Need to Know to Stay Healthy?

Many men may have been taught how to fix a flat tire, a leaky faucet or even how to patch a hole in the wall, but do you know what you need to do to stay healthy? Did you know African American men are at higher risk for many health issues? If you are an African American man and want to stay healthy, this fact sheet may help you as you make your own list to keep your health in check.

When Should African American Men See a Doctor?

Routine checkups can spot a number of conditions that can impact a man's health, including prostate cancer. Knowing when to see a doctor may help you be more aware of your health. Many screenings and checkups can be planned, so it is good to know why you need them and how often to have them.

CHECKUPS & SCREENINGS	WHY?	WHEN?
Physical Exam	Preventative care for total health	Annually
Testicular Exam	Screens for testicular cancer	Annually, during physical exam or right away if you find lumps during self-exams
Blood Pressure	Screens for hypertension (high blood pressure)	Annually or as directed by your doctor
Cholesterol	If high, can lead to heart disease	Every 5 years or as directed by your doctor
Prostate-Specific Antigen (PSA) Test	Screens for prostate cancer	African American men and men with a family history are at a higher risk for developing prostate cancer. Consider talking to your doctor at age 45 about whether prostate cancer screening is right for you.
A1C Test	Screens for high blood sugar levels	If you have a family history of diabetes, are overweight, or have personal concerns, talk to your doctor about screening for this condition.

What African American Men Should Know

What is the Most Common Cancer for African American Men?

For many men, cancer is a word you would rather avoid. Yet, learning about cancer may help you keep your health in check. The three top cancers for men are:

PROSTATE

LUNG

COLORECTAL

Did you know about 30,000 African American men will be told they have prostate cancer this year? African American men and Caribbean men of African ancestry face a higher risk for being diagnosed with prostate cancer. They are also more likely to be diagnosed with prostate cancer at younger ages. It is not clear why prostate cancer affects African American men more than other racial/ethnic groups, but it is known that African American men are nearly 2.5 times more likely to die of the disease.

What Else Should African American Men Keep on their Health Checklist?

For men, urology includes the urinary tract and the male reproductive organs, or, you could think of them as the systems below the belt. Below are some other healthy living tips to keep in mind for your health checklist:

Blood Pressure: If you have a blood pressure of <120/80 mm Hg, it is a normal range, but nearly 45% of African American men have high blood pressure (hypertension).

Weight: A normal body mass index (BMI) for African American men is 18.5 to 24.9. For example, someone who is 6 feet tall can weigh up to 183 pounds and be considered at a healthy weight. But, 38% of African American men are not in that range and are considered obese. Follow up with your doctor to understand what your appropriate weight and BMI should be. Also, a preferred cholesterol range should be less than 200 mg/dL.

Sugar: Keeping check for high blood sugar levels with an A1C test can help screen for diabetes. An A1C result below 5.7% is considered normal, 5.7% to 6.4% may be a sign of prediabetes, and 6.5% or higher may be a sign of diabetes.

Sleep: You should strive to get 7 to 9 hours of sleep as an adult. Poor sleep habits may bring a higher risk for chronic disease. Consult with your doctor if you are having issues getting restful sleep.

Sex: Did you know that 30 million men have erectile dysfunction (ED) in the United States? ED may be influenced by smoking, obesity, diabetes, and sedentary life style.

Every man is unique, so talk with your doctor about the numbers and screenings right for you.
